New World Order Background Guide

Revolution: Demanding Progress or Endorsing Chaos?

I. Overview

Taking place in the summer of 1942, deep into World War II, delegates will represent leaders of Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, and Imperial Japan in order to discuss the Axis Powers' military and political moves as they try to build a new world order. Actions by the Allied Powers will be frequently announced in order to test delegates' abilities to respond to changing circumstances. If delegates can collaborate and plan successfully, they will have the ability to change the outcome of the war and reshape the world as we know it.

II. Procedures/ Scoring

- This committee will NOT follow the traditional rules of parliamentary procedure. As a result, it is recommended that only experienced delegates participate.
 - There will be NO position papers, NO speakers list, and NO resolutions: debate will be much more fluid and centered on action orders.
 - The room will be in a continuous moderated caucus, but delegates are encouraged to motion for unmoderated caucuses when needed.
- Delegate scoring will focus on accurate portrayal of the historical figure and general leadership in the room.
 - Delegates MUST research the key events and people that surround this crisis in order to score highly. Points are awarded for a realistic depiction of the mindset and behaviors of the historical figure, NOT for advocating one's own personal beliefs.
 - Critical thinking and improvisational skills are critical to performing well and solving the crisis.

III. Goals of the Room

- The task is simple: defeat the Allied forces and establish a new world order by any means necessary.
 - Conflict, treachery, and political/military savvy are critical to success in a world ravaged by war.
 - Respond to and counter Allied actions in a manner that will lead the Axis powers to victory.
